

- John Adams (from his October 11, 1798, address to the officers of the First Brigade of the Third Division of the Militia of Massachusetts):

"Our Constitution was made only for a moral and religious people. It is wholly inadequate to the government of any other."

4 – The 20th-Century Spiritual Decline (last half of the conclusion)

- The Basis: This moves the timeline into modern history. After establishing the warnings, the film demonstrates the fulfillment of those warnings by jumping to the 1960s Supreme Court cases (Engel v. Vitale), illustrating the direct consequences of removing biblical frameworks from public education.
- Key Focus: Contrasts modern education with the original design of early American literacy.
- The Quote:
 - Noah Webster (from the preface and instructional material of his early American educational textbooks):

"The Christian religion is the most important... in which all children ought to be early instructed, because its doctrines provide the only foundation for civil society, for sound laws, and for absolute justice."

5 – The Call to Action: Remember and Rebuild (final 10 – 15 minutes)

- The Basis: Every Adullam Films documentary concludes with a spiritual appeal. After presenting the problem (secularism and cultural decline), the film closes its remaining runtime by offering the solution: a grassroots push for primary-source education and a spiritual revival.
- Key Directive: Urges believers to bypass modern textbooks and study original colonial charters, state constitutions, and founders' journals.
- The Quote:
 - Daniel Webster (celebrated 19th-century American statesman and orator, quoted at the film's climax regarding the survival of American freedom):

"If we abide by the principles taught in the Bible, our country will go on prospering and to prosper; but if we and our posterity neglect its instructions and authority, no man can tell how sudden a catastrophe may overwhelm us and bury all our glory in profound obscurity."

Introduction

Since America is in trouble in many ways, let's learn more about:

- The Principles of Liberty
- The Founders' Warnings
- Modern Secularism
- Today's Call to Action

The contents of this brochure are based on the conclusion of the documentary: The True Christian History of America (Adullam Films)

1 – The Core Premise: History Belongs to God (103:00)

- The Basis: This serves as the thesis statement for the entire final section. The film transitions away from pure European history (like Cromwell and the 1689 Bill of Rights) to establish the theological lens through which the audience should view the American experiment.
- Key Concept: History reflects the hand of God and divine principles rather than random political coincidences.
- The Problem Addressed: Secular education often credits the French Enlightenment for American freedom. The film contrasts the American Revolution with the bloody secularism of the French Reign of Terror.
- The Quote: The documentary underscores the historical context of the era by citing early American minister John Prince from his 1798 sermon, warning his congregation that secular French ideals were a trap:
"The name of Liberty has been used as a decoy to bring people into a state of the most wretched slavery."
- The Scripture Focus: "Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord..." — Psalm 33:12

2 – Faith and the Founding Era (Addressing Myths vs. Truth) (first half of the conclusion)

- The Basis: Before the film can argue that America has lost its heritage, it spends the first major block of the conclusion establishing what that heritage was. This is where the commentators spend significant time breaking down the legal language of William Blackstone and dismantling secular interpretations of the Treaty of Tripoli.

- Key Figures & Events: Studies Thomas Jefferson, George Washington, John Adams, and Samuel Adams, while deconstructing the Treaty of Tripoli (1797).

- The Quotes:

- Sir William Blackstone (defining the legal phrase "The Laws of Nature and of Nature's God" used in the Declaration of Independence):

"Upon these two foundations, the law of nature and the law of revelation [Scripture], depend all human laws; that is to say, no human laws should be suffered to contradict these."

- Samuel Adams (speaking on the spiritual shift of the American Revolution just before signing the Declaration of Independence):

"We have this day restored the Sovereign to Whom all men ought to be obedient. He reigns in heaven and from the rising to the setting of the sun, let His kingdom come... The reign of political Protestantism will commence."

- John Adams (writing down his reflections in a letter to Thomas Jefferson on June 28, 1813):

"The general principles on which the fathers achieved independence were the general principles of Christianity."

3 – The Founders' Prophetic Warnings (middle of the conclusion)

- The Basis: Once the film establishes the high spiritual standard of the Founding era, it transitions logically into the warnings left by the Founders. The narrative framework pairs the active building of the nation with Washington's and Adams' explicit letters stating that the system would fail if the population abandoned Christian morality.
- Key Figures: George Washington and John Adams.
- The Quotes:
 - George Washington (from his 1796 Farewell Address, warning against removing religion from the public square):

"Of all the dispositions and habits which lead to political prosperity, religion and morality are indispensable supports. In vain would that man claim the tribute of patriotism, who should labor to subvert these great pillars of human happiness, these firmest props of the duties of men and citizens."
